

XM Radio is a subscriber service and the NAB has no authority to dictate what is broadcast XM Radio. I have decided that paying for radio service is the only logical choice to get good, original and interesting radio compared to the "free" broadcast radio that is all commercials and politically/commercially influenced. Broadcast radio doesn't have the listeners' best interest in mind, only their pocketbooks. XM radio is committed to providing it's subscribers quality radio at an affordable price and free of government control, it should be kept that way.
